ILLEGAL; MELLONS
REFUSE BOND ISSUE

Technicality Results in Failure of $100,000 Improvement Loan.

SOLICITOR ASSUMES THE BLAME

Commissioner Higbee Says He Fails to Check Up and Signify Dates on Which Notice Was to Appear in Newspapers; Must Do It All Over.

Because of a technicality, the $100,000 bond issue, which was passed at a special election and was recently awarded to the Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh at a handsome premium, has been rejected by the Mellon National Bank and the entire project must be gone over again. All the details incident to the issue were attended to correctly except the publication of the election notices, which was run in one newspaper four times in five days and in the other four times in ten days, whereas the law requires the publication to be made once a week for four successive weeks.

Superintendent of accounts and business John J. Kane reported to Commissioner Higbee that though it was thought when the error was discovered that it might not prove serious enough to cause the bond issue to be thrown out, the Mellon National Bank had refused to take the bonds and it would be necessary to hold another election and repeat all of the steps attendant upon it.

He showed that this means a delay in street improvement work which may result in many of the paving projects being deferred until next spring, as by the time another election is held and the bonds issued, it will be late in the fall and construction work will be almost impossible because of the approach of freezing weather.

Solicitor E. C. Higbee assumed the blame for the failure of the bond issue. He admitted that he had neglected to check up the publication of the ordinance or to mark specifically the dates on which it should have appeared in the newspapers. He declared that while such a defect would not prevent payment on a bond, nevertheless it constituted such a blot on the record of a bond as would prevent its sale readily, especially when sold at a going premium.

It was decided to start in immediately and re-run the bond ordinance, and the first step, that of signing the ordinance of the city council to issue bonds in the sum of $100,000 to refund outstanding bonds and provide for street improvement work, was introduced on first reading.

Whether a special election will be held or the matter submitted to the voters at the regular election in November will be decided at the conference of councilmen next Monday afternoon prior to the special meeting in the evening. There was some discussion on this point. Mr. Kane, in favor of the opinion that if the bond issue was repassed as expeditiously as possible some paving could be done before hard weather set in. Mr. Higbee expressed his belief that it would be better to wait until the November election to submit the proposition to the people and then have everything in shape to start work next spring. He said he had given no opinion on the point of whether the ordinance could be secured during the winter.

OFFICE BOYS TELL OF SHOOTING OF CALMETTE

Found Editor Cowering Behind Desk After Mino. Callaux Fired, One Says.

By Associated Press.
PARIS, July 21.—Mino. Callaux was shot at 7 o'clock this morning preparing for the second day's hearing in the trial for murder on March 18 of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro. The wife of the former premier and minister of finance took an early breakfast and before 8 o'clock was waiting for her husband who, however, did not call at the prison till between 9 and 10.

The prisoner and her husband conversed for half an hour and afterward she lunched. "I feel better than I did yesterday," she said to the solicitor warden when he inquired today about her health. She had looked through a mass of morning papers and had found that generally she had been treated sympathetically.

The stenographic report of her testimony filled 16 columns in some of the papers and beside this in three were made appreciations of her dexterous arrangement of facts and of the feeling she had put into her description of her agony.

After Judge Albanel and his associates had taken their places, Mme. Callaux entered the courtroom without hesitation and with an air of making herself at home. Joseph Callaux, her husband, then entered and took his place among the witnesses. He was accompanied by detectives owing to the fact that a group of bystanders had booed him and shouted insults at him as he left the prison after leaving his wife.

Two of the boys from the Figaro were the first witnesses. They described the arrival at the office of the Figaro on the day of the crime of Mme. Callaux. They told how she waited and gave details of her entrance into the room occupied by Calmette and of their hearing the shots. One of them, Adrien Nicot, crouched down in the witness stand and uttered a series of low cries to show how he had found Calmette hiding behind his desk.

Implicated in Lobby Investigation, Chicago Man Submits Resignation on Floor House.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 21.—Representative James M. McDermott of Illinois today on the floor of the House offered his resignation, to take effect at once. McDermott is under charges in connection with the lobby investigation.

McDermott, Democrat, representing a constituency which includes the stockyards district of Chicago, was one of the figures in the exposure of the National Association of Manufacturers. A minority report recommended that he be expelled.

"Unfortunately," he said, "I came to this House a poor man; fortunately for myself, however, taking into consideration the character of the charge made against me I leave this House a poor man. I have been compelled during my service as a member of this House to borrow money from my friends. It so happened that after I was elected I became an opponent of legislation which passed this House affecting their business as pawn brokers and as liquor dealers.

200 PLEDGES SHY; CHAUTAUQUA FOR 1915 IS DOUBTFUL

Rodpath Bureau Gives No Assurance That Connellsville Will Be Booked.

CULTURE CLUB IS HESITATING

Women Who Stood Guarantor for it This Year Have Not Expressed Willingness to Undertake the Placing of the Tickets Yet Engaged.

Connellsville may not have a Chautauqua next season. About 200 pledges in selling 1,000 tickets for the season have been made and the management refuses to assure the city a place on its list unless some organization stands guarantor for this deficiency.

Prior to yesterday, only 500 pledges had been received. At the afternoon session 40 more were received, and after about an hour's exhortation at the evening session, 200 more were turned in, making the total 700, or 230 less than the required number.

Bar J. J. Thoutt added his efforts to those of the clerkship of the city who had previously spoken in favor of another Chautauqua. Last night, and the final rally brought in 200 pledges, but this was not sufficient.

The Women's Culture Club, which stood sponsor for the Chautauqua this season, has not as yet signified its willingness to undertake the selling of the remaining tickets. This year the club looked like the women were going to face a deficit when only 800 tickets had been sold the day before the Chautauqua opened, but by opening a booth down town the ladies succeeded in selling 250 tickets and thus made a little money instead of coming out with a deficit.

Superintendent Brockway, who conducted the sessions, stated that no assurance could be given until the 1,000 tickets were pledged.

The Chautauqua program, this year was a good one, well worth the $2 asked for season tickets, but it is the general opinion that the Rodpath program is better than the one of last year. An extra bill is likely to be added to the program.

FIND MAN'S CLOTHES ON RIVER-BANK; FEAR DROWNING

Believe It Was Victim of Yough River Flood. Near the Old Sodoma Sheds.

The finding of a man's clothes along the bank of the Yough at the old Sodoma sheds this morning leads to the belief that Antonio Pretoratti, aged 22, an Italian, was drowned some time during the night.

This morning Steve Pretoratti, a youth, was passing Sodoma he noticed the clothes on the bank at the old swimming hole. He notified several companions. They gathered the clothes and brought them to the city hall where State Constable, a sister-in-law of Pretoratti, heard of the finding and called the police station, telling them that she thought she could find the clothing. Chief of Police Bowman sent Special Officer J. W. Mitchell to the scene to investigate.

Mrs. Cavanaugh stated that Pretoratti had worked yesterday at the Baltimore Hotel. He was employed at the Baltimore Hotel and he returned home at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Cavanaugh went to J. Pretoratti's store to make a purchase. When she returned home Antonio was nowhere. She thought nothing of his disappearance at the time.

OLD SOL ON HAND AT CAMP; HOSPITAL CORPS IS BUSY

Word from Indiana Is That National Guard Boys Find Rays of the Sun Pretty Strong.

CAMP GEN. JAMES A. BRAVER, July 20.—With the weather man working over time at Camp Beaver Sunday was as perfect a day as one could desire. Visitors from all sections began arriving early at the camp Sunday morning. It was estimated that fully 10,000 people visited the camp on Sunday.

The boys of Company D, including the band, eagerly watched for visitors from their local city. A large delegation of Connellsville people were present at the camp. They were entertained by the band, Company D and the Hospital Corps, in the various mess-tents at meal time.

At 5 P. M. the entire brigade was inspected by Brigadier General Logan, the large drill ground. Severe maneuvers were applauded by thousands who were viewing the inspection. The work of the cavalry was particularly good. The services of the hospital corps were needed on several occasions for soldiers who found Old Sol too much for them.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES FIRE HOSE AND STREET FLUSHERS

Long Pavers and No Action Cause Meeting to Drag Out Until Half Past Eleven.

Discussion of fire hose and types of street flushers occupied so much time at council meeting last night that the session was drawn out until 11:30 o'clock. Action was taken on neither proposition.

Bids on hose were received from six manufacturers and there were three agents present. They explained to council as best they could the merits of their brands, but they were not satisfactorily explained why an 80 cent hose was guaranteed for three years when the same was one for which $1.20 a foot was asked. There was some difference of opinion, but just what it was their firms had not divulged to them.

The matter was referred to Superintendent F. W. Wright for a more thorough investigation and recommendation.

The street flusher men were heard and Engineer Hest also told of his inspection of makes in Pittsburg. They round was not sure it wanted to buy a flusher so the matter has been deferred. Mayor Marietta thinks it would be better to get some good streets to flush before buying a machine of this kind.

Mr. Perkins of the West Side company planned to council of a ferocious dog belonging to a Mrs. Kentz.

It was decided to meet representatives of the West Penn and the Bell telephone companies next Monday afternoon. The information has been proposed new street lighting and the latter about a condall ordinance.

Proposals for 25,000 No. 1 brick also caused some discussion but no action was taken.

SAYS CHICKS WERE POISONED

Doughy Paste in Garden Eaten by Poultry With Fatal Results.

Poisoning chickens is likely to cause trouble for Rebecca Provance who lives on the other side of Dunbar. The information was made against her before Alderman O'Donovan by Edward Holland. He claims that also of his young chickens that he and more are likely to pass away before the trial comes on.

The prosecutor and defendant live next to each other, Holland having rented the house from the Provances. He has young chickens and the Provances claim that they got into their garden. Holland was ordered to move out and did not do so. Then, it is alleged, the defendant scattered a doughy paste over their lot claiming it was to keep the flies off her cabbage.

The chickens ate the paste and died. Information was at once made out and the case was tried last evening. The paste was exhibited at the alderman's office and it was proved that the Provances had put it between the heads instead of on them. The case was held over until Friday at 8 o'clock in order that the dough may be analyzed by a chemist.

INSPECTION TOUR OF FRICK PLANTS;
BIG IMPROVEMENT

Officials and Newspaper Men Find Plants in Lower Region in Fine Shape.

GARDENS ARE WORTH $200,000

Estimate of Value of Truck Raised by Residents of the Coke Towns Is $50,000 Higher Than That of Last Year; Business Depression the Cause.

W. H. Clingerman of Scitdale, general superintendent of the H. C. Frick Coke Company; John Lynch of Connellsville, general superintendent of the Union Supply Company's stores, and representatives of the Fayette county newspapers, made an inspection of a number of modern plants of the H. C. Frick Coke Company in the lower Connellsville region yesterday. Practically the entire day was spent making the trip.

Quite an improvement over last year was found in conditions at all the plants and the officials were very enthusiastic over the interest shown by the residents at the different towns. A big difference was noticed in the gardens and lawns, virtually every foot of ground being utilized, and the garden and lawn work the most extensive witnessed by the party. The awarding of prizes by the company for the best gardens and lawns has been a great incentive to the residents of the coke region. Keen rivalry exists and as the result improved gardens and lawns are shown each year. The company furnishes the fertilizer and the men and women eagerly seize the opportunities afforded by sales. Every square inch of space in the gardens. The gardens not only lower the cost of living but afford their owners better living.

As some of the plants several of the gardens were devoted mostly to cabbage, beets and corn, while at others there was greater variety. One of the noticeable features in gardening were the hillside gardens. These were cultivated under great difficulties, the owners having to contend with the hillside gardens. These were cultivated under great difficulties, the owners having to contend with the hillside gardens. These were cultivated under great difficulties, the owners having to contend with the hillside gardens.

The sanitary condition of all the towns is worthy of special mention. At each plant there is a man to look after these conditions and the residents comply with the request of the company in this respect. All the houses were in line condition. In many instances the coke towns show marked improvement over larger towns or cities. Every industry is given by the company, and the coke workers and their families lend their hearty co-operation.

All plants have fine fire protection. They have organized fire departments and weekly fire drills are held. The children of the H. C. Frick Coke company's plants also have advantages equal to those of the children of larger cities. They have grade and high schools and play grounds where all amusements are afforded. On Sunday, as well as weekdays, hundreds of children assemble at the different play grounds and the time of their lives. Since the play grounds were introduced not an accident has occurred.

Only those who have made the trip over the Coke region can appreciate the many modern improvements that now exist at all the newer plants. Some time ago the company abandoned the custom of painting all the company houses white. Instead many are painted light grey, which brings of a darker grey. They are modern in every respect, being equipped with electric lights, baths and water. At some of the plants 90 per cent of the residents are foreigners. Their lawns showed quite an improvement over the lawns of the American homes.

For the reason that about 50 per cent of the owners of the H. C. Frick Coke Company are foreigners, the men have time to work in the gardens and this year it is estimated that their value will reach almost $200,000 or about $50,000 more than last year. In addition to furnishing fertilizer, the company also furnishes the tenants with most of the seed.

Well kept lawns, with bright-colored flowers of all varieties, were seen at all the homes. The men especially took great pride in them and were viewed and admired. At some of the plants there were no uncultivated gardens while at others there were but two or three.

Phillips is among the largest and is the model plant of the company. Here all the houses are painted grey, and the play ground is one of the finest in the region. Lambert has the deepest shaft in the region, the depth being 828 feet. It is a perfectly dry shaft, a sprinkler being kept on hand all the time.

At Leokree the houses are in six different patches and while they are up-to-date electric houses, the plant is not as convenient as many others. It was not built by the company, but was bought from another company.

The bath-house at Collier, is a great feature and has proven very convenient to the miners. It is a large brick building with a shower bath for each man and a locker for his clothes. It is the intention of the company to improve the plant.

Remodeling Store.

Work was commenced this morning by the Keystone Lumber Company on the remodeling of the Connellsville Drug Company's store.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN GET FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to put up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excess-thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people, and most of our moderns, are afflicted with a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh-producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nutriment for the tissues and blood and its result is a remarkable improvement in the condition of the body. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Let its action be perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution.—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.—Adv.

BLACK AND WHITE.

The Favored Combination For Smart Gowns In Paris.

BLACK AND WHITE STRIPED GOWN.

Even when cotton materials are selected there is a distinct tendency to favor striped or lined materials. The summer outfit suit illustrated here is of black and white striped cotton fabric with Roman striped ribbon on the collar.

The black of the early season has been replaced by black and white, and it is hard these days to tell who is in mourning and who is not unless a crape or ribbon edged mourning veil droops from the hat.

Thin white veils are made all the whiter by strings of black beads falling over the front, and sometimes the black beads are edged by a thin strip of black velvet or of satin ribbon set at the crossing of the surplised waist front.

With tailors of black pussy willow tulle, mohair and worsted mittens, poplin, all favored for the season's wear, these white waists with their black beads and bows are extremely chic even though decidedly suggestive of half mourning.

THE VACATION WARDROBE.

Limit the Number of Garments, but Select Them Carefully.

In selecting the wardrobe for the summer vacation common sense should be the guide. The first essential is to be prepared for any sort of weather. Therefore a couple of tailor suits are indispensable, one of the summer type, the other of the "sports" order—slim, serviceable and substantial. A motor coat and a waterproof, the latter a "mackinaw," in good color and of reproducible make; a wrap that, while thoroughly protective, is fit for the smartest occasion when uncertain weather must be guarded against, may be included.

A sufficiency of trim tailored cut shirts for these gowns and perhaps one or two blouses should be selected. immaculate and appropriate footgear—dainty shoes or boots, with cloth tops for the best gown, real country boots or shoes for the other, a couple of hats, one of the simplest type for travel and hand wear, the other as useful as you please, but not of perishable order, and a sports cap may complete the outdoor kit.

Unless one is going to a house where extensive festivities may be expected two evening gowns should be quite sufficient. Don't forget those delightful and dainty rest gowns of the kimono type, made of thin broche silk and cotton or crepe, that are so useful and charming and take up next to no room in one's baggage.

Only one evening wrap need be taken, and that a thin one, such as a graceful voluminous burraco of nylon or mousseline de sole, which can be folded into the thinnest compass and yet affords sufficient warmth to protect one against drafts or chilly indoors. For if one has to motor to dinners or dances at a distance the motor coat would be worn during the drive.

LIGHTWEIGHT WRAPS.

Half-length afternoon wraps of plain and flowered silks are a Parisian fancy. Linen dust coats for women are very plain, useful looking garments.

Imported golfing is much used for women's sports coats.

Cont. chains have gone out, but head necklaces of all colors are much in vogue.

Dressing sacks are shirred at the waist line as they used to be.

Long strings of jet are worn with elaborate evening gowns.

Playing Outdoors.

From 10 to 12 each morning the little ones should romp and play out of doors. If you have a good sized yard this may be used as a playground for the children.

In one corner have a small sawsaw. In another part of the yard have a low broad fence made from studding. A boy never tires of climbing on this and seeing how well he can walk it. This is a most excellent physical exercise. Plain attractive plays that will give the children strong muscles will under control and vigorous exercises that will make the whole body healthy and give self reliance for later life.

A shelter in the yard is most helpful. It may be made, but will serve the purpose of protection on very cold or warm days. It should have a large window to allow the sun to light and warm it, so that except on the coldest days it is really a comfortable place in which the youngsters can play.

Inhaling Water.

Undoubtedly a number of bathers who are drowned meet their deaths from cramp. Cramp is liable to seize anybody at any moment, and when it comes in deep water few swimmers have sufficient presence of mind to turn on their backs and wait quietly until the attack has departed. So they go under. But there is another danger quite as imminent as cramp, though it is probably less known. This is water inhalation. A swimmer or even a wader is always liable to inhale spray through his nostrils, which, passing through the pharynx and behind the epiglottis or windpipe guard, gets into the windpipe and causes death. As one would expect, water inhalation is almost wholly confined to the sea and very rarely occurs in fresh water. All the same, it may happen anywhere.

A New Species.

Charles H. Knight, an artist, whose reproductions of dinosaurs and creatures of long ago are known the world over, prefers, however, to be known as a painter and sculptor of modern animals. He has worked from the living model as much as possible, and this has taken him to the zoos in many cities. He was telling his experiences at the zoo in Washington.

"One afternoon an important looking negro came along with his best girl," he said. "They stopped for a minute and looked at the sketch I was making of a deer.

"'You know what he is doing, don't you?' asked the negro of his companion. 'Mebbe,' answered the woman. 'Does you?'

"'Sho! He's making a landscape of one of our habitats. Dere's me habitation in dis zoo than anywhere else in der United States!'"—New York Tribune.

Gibraltar's Searchlight Battery.

For ships to pass around Gibraltar, England's and the world's greatest fortress, without being observed even at night is a practical impossibility, owing to the great battery of searchlights arranged along the bottom of the rock, ship running either in or out runs into one of the fixed beams of light and is revealed. A moving beam of light then follows her until the lookout officers are satisfied as to her intentions.

Miss Betty B. Taylor Taking a Little Stroll.

The diminutive young lady whose portrait is shown herewith was taking a walk when the camera man snapped her. She had hold of her father's hand and was skipping along in great glee. Her father is T. Saffern Taylor, well known in society and business affairs. The girl's name is Betty, and she was visiting the Piping Rock horse races with her parents. It is unlikely that Betty took much interest in the horses. She was much more engrossed in playing with her little brother, who is not much older than she. Piping Rock is situated on Long Island and is a famous resort of society folk. There are held horse shows and races, mainly for the amusement of the upper ten. In winter Betty B. lives in New York, but her summer home is at Newport.

Advice For Boy Scouts.

When starting on a hike leave your coat at home, advises L. W. Schmidt, scoutmaster of the boy scouts at Connelton, Pa. You don't need it while on the move. If it rains it gets wet so quickly that it is of little use and is very heavy. When you get to camp, if you are on an overnight hike, you will take it off to eat a brewer. A sweater coat is far better. It packs easily, you can use it to tie things in and you can sleep in it if the weather turns cold. As to socks or stockings, all authorities unite in claiming that for hikes of any distance wool is the thing. Wool absorbs the perspiration or any chance dampness from the outside and makes the best cushion to preserve the foot from chafing.

Your shirt should be of flannel, not cotton, silk or linen. If you are going to camp overnight and your flannel shirt is dripping with perspiration change into a sweater, and it may occur to you that it would be a good plan to wash the shirt and have it ready for the next day. If you do so be careful not to wring it out. Hang it up dripping wet, and it will not shrink.

Ugly Mug.

This is a good game for exercising and evites movement among your little friends. The players stand in a circle and suit their actions to the following lines:

I put my ugly mug in (Each head is thrust forward);
I put my ugly mug out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my right elbow in;
I put my right elbow out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my left elbow in;
I put my left elbow out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my right foot in;
I put my right foot out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

Then follows the left foot, right arm and left arm, etc. As much of the fun depends upon the shaking, the "shake, shake, shake," should be given as comically as possible.

RATS FREE FROM PLAGUE.

New York Health Department Traps Hundreds Under River Piers.

Health Commissioner Goldwater of New York city said that the department was taking effective steps to prevent the entrance of bubonic plague into the city. As rats are the principal source of the spread of the disease, the health department has had hundreds of rodents trapped under the piers and along the water front. The laboratory reports show that the search for the plague bacilli has been of negative results.

Of the rats brought into port on steamers and sailing vessels, there are, Dr. Goldwater said, three classes in particular recognized as carriers of the dreaded plague bacilli—the Norwegian, the western and the Indian rats. Specimens of each have been captured along the Manhattan and Brooklyn water fronts in the last two months, but examination has proved them to be free from plague bacilli. Dr. Haven Emerson of the board of health has charge of this work, which will be continued as long as there is any danger of the disease, being brought into New York.

FINE FEATHERS

Novelized from Eugene Walter's Drama by the same name
by WEBSTER DENISON

FROM THE PLAY
Copyright A. C. McArthur, 1914

"The millionaire laughed. 'I've heard that before,' he answered. 'Seems to me your friend Brand has made a blunder. But wait—' he held up his hand to stop Reynolds' reply. 'You asked me how you can help it. I'm going to tell you. You recollect that you were a pretty good friend of mine at school. Worked your heart and soul out trying to get me on the varsity eight and the eleven.

"Yes, and you didn't make them."
"There's that wonderful memory again. But, never mind. One good turn deserves another and I'm here for that purpose. I am a business man and I handle things from that standpoint."

"The modern business man," said Reynolds, "is something of an enigma to me. I have never been able to figure out just exactly what he is."

"That is obvious, Bob. You wouldn't be living here if you had. Maybe I can show you. I want to put you on the inside where you will be looking out, instead of always on the outside looking in. Now, the United Construction company makes the sacrifice of paying you something every week, doesn't it?"

"Yes, but I hope they don't look at it in that light."

"How much do you get?"

"Twenty-five dollars."

"What's your position?"

"I'm a chemist at the head of their testing department. Not very important, is it?"

"You and me now," Brand answered quickly. "It's very important. Your company has the contract for the Pecos River dam job, hasn't it?"

"Yes."

"It also contemplates other construction work both in Pennsylvania and the West, with a good chance of getting it."

"I believe that's right."

"This Pecos job is a big contract?"

"One of the biggest we ever had."

"I suppose one of the most important things you do is to test the cement as to its solidifying quality?"

"Yes, that's my work. I have an assistant who looks after the steel. The cement is the most important part of the job."

"How close can you approximate the endurance of cement?"

"It's part of my duty to know the difference in grades. For instance, the ordinary Portland is put up in most work ought to hold tight a hundred years. There is a closer process of refinement that would extend the life another fifty years."

"Exactly. Now, it's that closer process of refinement that I want to talk to you about." Brand crossed the room and stood facing Reynolds. He took out a paper. "Here are the specifications of the Pecos job. I am furnishing the cement."

"Yes?"

"Yes, I'm the Hudson Cement company. We have this contract, Bob, and this closer refinement of the cement you were speaking of is called for in the specifications. Now, on this job alone, it will mean an extra expense to us of something like two hundred thousand dollars. It's very problematical in my mind whether that same extra expense will increase the life of the cement five years, or matter how many centuries, boys figure and potter. Anyway, it won't be over twenty-five years. I don't know who got up these specifications, but in my mind he is pretty much of a d—n fool. Now for the kick-off. Here's my chance to give you and your wife that big boost—make you both financially independent, wipe out that college obligation, and, at the same time, help me."

"That's kind of you. It'll make her very happy."

Brand concealed a smile. "As I told you," he continued, "that closer process of refinement is called for in the specifications, but—Bob—what we want is to have the tests go through on our regular cement—the ordinary grade—the same we sell everybody. If you save that two hundred thousand dollars for me I think a fair division of that saving is to give you forty thousand dollars."

"But there's the government inspection!" said Reynolds. "I'm only under him."

"Don't you worry about anybody but yourself. I want to help you, but I'm a business man and there'll be no loose ends."

"But it's stealing."

"No, it's business."

"If I did that, I'd be a thief."

"Bob, this is a nasty word, and it's used altogether too carelessly these days. Now I'm not here to teach you moral lessons or anything like that, but are you doing any harm in accepting this? No, you're doing what any successful business man would do. You're taking a chance of making forty thousand dollars. And why? Because you're cheating the people? No. Because the dam will fall down? Certainly not. The dam will last a hundred years. Now, a lot of public improvements are put up to last one hundred years and you know their history. They're generally torn down in twenty. And this particular dam is not half big enough for the requirements. The chances are it will be rebuilt in less than twenty-five years. It's a case of peace and quiet, looking for the future."

"Appropriation goes, and you know it."

"But I tell you it's graft."

"No, it's taking advantage of the foolish and incompetent speculations made for this job. Why, it's not even sharp practice. It's making money on another man's mistake. It's picking up the loose ends of a business deal and putting them in your pocket, and believe me, it's the loose ends that have made the American millionaire."

"Is that the secret?"

"Certainly. Why, it's the same opportunity that would come to you if you were walking across a farm, kicked up some dirt and discovered gold. Would you go to the owner of the farm and say: 'There's gold on your land; I hope it makes you rich?' Certainly not. You'd buy the farm. You might stake him to the potatoes, but you'd take the gold. What the devil is the matter with you fellows who are always working your hearts and souls out for twenty-five dollars a week because of your Sunday school notions? Here's an opportunity right in your hand. Don't let it go by. Take advantage of it."

"Not me, Brand."

"All right. We can get along without our end of that particular profit, even if it is a useless waste. Waste, I tell you, and nothing else. But Bob, you can't get along without the forty thousand, and let me tell you something; labor doesn't make money; toil doesn't make money—for the toiler! The only thing that makes money is money, and if you haven't some of it to turn over and make into some more, you're going to work for somebody else all your life. That's the toiler's job. Now, be sensible. Take this and stop worrying."

"John, I'm afraid you have got into the wrong house. It's true I haven't got anything but twenty-five dollars a week—that I haven't paid for this home, which you say you partly own, and for which you so kindly overcharged me. It's true that I've got a wife to take care of and can't even buy her the pretty things she wants. But, supposing I take your money. What is the price I pay for it? My conscience. I'd have money in the bank, but fear and dread of God in my heart."

"Fear, diddlestick! It's not fear in your heart, but chills in your feet, that's worrying you. What you need, Bob, is nerve, and—money. Good old American anger are the greatest nerve-builders in the world."

"I know it, but I want to get into the daylight like a white man, not in the dark like a footpad."

"Well, you're mighty particular about yourself, but supposing you think of some one else. How about your wife? Don't you think you might do something for her? If you were taking one nickel from the people, or stealing a cent, I wouldn't argue with you, but you're not. You're simply taking advantage of another man's blunder. You can't stop that blunder; you can't go to that man and have these specifications changed. But you can take this money and put your wife in a better position. If you don't do it, it's your own fault. Bob, if you stick to those specifications you're throwing that two hundred thousand dollars and your share of it away, just as if you dropped it in the river. I'm showing you how you can save forty thousand dollars. But, so, you won't do it. Instead of that you talk about doing it. Instead of that you talk about grafting and stealing and conscience, and all of the gibberish you did in the yellow papers. Now, I'm telling you straight; you're throwing away an opportunity that may never come to you again. You're stepping right over the gold on the farm and you're handing it to somebody else. Oh, I'm so sorry."

The sudden entrance of his wife prevented a reply by Reynolds. Both men rose to their feet. Bob, in the height of his moral combat with Brand, had almost forgotten her proximity. Brand had, and in his perversion, as it were, when he saw that Reynolds showed no sign of accepting his offer, he had purposely raised his voice so that she could hear. Jane extended her hand now as her husband presented the millionaire, and she smiled a welcome.

"I couldn't help but hear," she said. "and I thought I had better let you know. Am I in the way?"

"Not at all," Brand promptly answered. "You see, Mrs. Reynolds, Bob and I are old friends, and I would like to be counted among his wife's friends also."

"Thank you. I can believe that."

She turned a more serious face to her husband. "Bob," she asked quietly, "don't you think you had better consider what Mr. Brand said?"

"Now, Jane, please!" he exclaimed. "I'm glad to have your advice in all things, but I cannot have you interfere in this. Please don't."

Jane made no response. Her husband's answer permitted none. It cut like a knife and brought the blood rushing to her cheeks; blood that seemed to forsake the heart, leaving it chilled, and beat the brain with rebellious and alien thoughts.

"I cannot have you interfere!" It was the first time he had ever used such terms. They sounded like the clarion notes of a trumpet. The walls resounded and burst them back to

Ladies, Here's a Live Wire! Mrs. Knowland's Trying to Boost Husband Into U. S. Senate.

CONGRESSMAN KNOWLAND'S WIFE CAMPAIGNING FOR HIS ELECTION TO U.S. SENATE her; walls that recalled her long hours of loneliness, hard walls, cold walls, cheap walls, walls that she had fought with; bare walls, that after days of toil she had embellished with inexpensive gifts and such knick-knacks as a woman's taste can summon; walls that reflected their poverty and their struggle against it.

"I cannot have you interfere!" The words burned and rankled. They scorched her flushed cheeks and pounded her temples. They pierced her brain; they ran thumping and bumping down her spine and left it stiff and cold.

She drew herself up to her full height and stood regarding the two men in silence. Unconsciously they realized that she was very beautiful, like some aristocratic animal at bay, startled, but not frightened. Her eyes traveled from one to the other, to the immaculate Brand, in his proper evening clothes, stamped with the indelible mark of success, to the shoddy, but victorious Reynolds, flaunting the face of failure. Despite the simple simplicity of her own dress, a blouse affair of blue serge, much worn, but endowed with such charm as an ingenious woman can impart, she looked more the mate of the millionaire than of the humbler man.

Brand, with his quick grasp of human nature and human passions, read the meaning of those glances. He read the mind in which now flashed the vision of her incongruous life; the life of a queenly woman lived in the environment of the bourgeois; he read scorn for the exorbitant demands of that life, inherent aversion to its petty economies and sacrifices, and he read, too, behind the firm lines of a pretty mouth, the stability and strength of character that had enabled her to combat those conditions. Here was a woman, he realized, who was a living companion and an efficient colleague for a man like himself; a woman who would walk hand in hand with Ambition, meet the test and revel in the reward. She loved her husband, and love, the great leveler of all caste, spanning all chasms, filling the little voids in each hiatus, had held her down to Reynolds' level and made her what she was—a true and loyal and sympathetic wife. Not that Reynolds was so pliant; he was of good stock; well educated, industrious, honest and lovable. Mentally, he was of true steel, big and solid, ready to withstand the world's rebuffs. But the keen intellect of his wife was of a finer mold; steel, too, but tempered, not only to repel, but to strike back and cut through.

There came to Brand, now, as there had come to him the full force of Reynolds' gaucherie—"I cannot have you interfere!"—truer, candid, unadorned phrase that stung and wounded and broke down the sympathetic bonds of forbearance. He saw them strike and saw her harden to steel. The man of the world smiled within himself, but not for them; smiled at poor Reynolds, for whose welfare he was so solicitous, smiled at his own success and stepped toward his coat and hat. His work, the system's work, was done.

CHAPTER VII.

A Conspiracy and a Discovery. In a luxurious suite on the seventeenth floor of one of lower Manhattan's office buildings, the president of the Hudson Cement company sat at his mahogany desk. He glanced hurriedly through a collection of letters that his secretary had selected from a larger mass as worthy of his chief's individual attention. He came at length to one addressed in a feminine hand. It was marked personal and the seal was unbroken. He opened it and read.

My Dear Mr. Brand: Your kind note received and I assure you that its contents are fully appreciated. I quite agree with you that Mr. Reynolds does not realize the magnitude of your offer or the opportunity it affords. Bob is an able worker and a good husband, but he is also a dreamer. I believe, and I want you to know I believe, that your attempt to help him is disinterested. I know that forty thousand dollars or two hundred thousand does not mean much to a man of your position and financial standing, and that you are going out of your way to lift a friend out of a narrow, hopeless channel of mere existence. We can do you no harm. I am a little conspirator to aid him in bringing him to his senses in spite of himself and his deluded ideas. With that end in view I can willingly be a party to it and I shall be most glad to see you any afternoon and perfect the plot.

Sincerely yours,

JANE REYNOLDS.

This letter was in response to one Brand had written expressing his regret at Reynolds' "foolish attitude," and suggesting that they "conspire" to make him reconsider his decision.

The reply had come without delay, and he saw that he was to have a willing ally. He pressed a button at his left and a young man entered from an adjoining room.

"Just a minute, Radcliffe," said the millionaire as he dashed off a few words on a telegraph blank. "Have this sent at once and if there is any business this afternoon that requires immediate attention refer it to Mr. Burns. I will not return after luncheon. Telephone for the car."

He put on his automobile coat and cap and went out. After he had dined —luncheon meant a substantial repast for Brand—he headed for Staten Island and arrived at the Reynolds' cottage a few minutes after the telegram had been delivered. Mrs. Reynolds answered his knock. She was dressed in the best that her meager wardrobe could afford for the occasion. A makeshift served as a motor coat and she wore a modest tam-o'-shanter, or elating cap. Mrs. Collins had been impressed into service as a chaperon. When summoned by Jane to enact the role she had become duly excited over the prospect of riding in an automobile with its millionaire owner. Quite knowingly she had winked the other eye when told that the trip was for purely business reasons and that there was no occasion to dress up. She had hurried home and made a more elaborate toilet than her neighbor. She donned her best coat and a large hat, then hastily essayed a rejuvenation through the magic of cosmetics with the result that the attempt was quite obvious even if the accomplishment fell short.

Delighted, I'm Sure.

Jane greeted Brand most cordially. "Your telegram came only a half hour ago," she told him. "I had no idea you would be so prompt in getting to work. But I guess you are ready. Mrs. Collins will accompany us."

Brand directed a grudging nod toward Mrs. Collins.

"Delighted, I'm sure," he answered with an attempt at cordiality. "There'll be plenty of room for her in the tonneau."

He was as good as his word. He led Mrs. Collins to the back of the huge eight-passenger car, assisted Jane to the front seat and ordered the chauffeur to await his return.

"I'm going to run it myself," he told Jane. "There aren't many policemen over here and I like a little excitement once in a while. It won't interfere with our talk."

He threw down the clutch and opened the muffler, sending the big machine off with a clug and a jump. They reached the main road and the car settled down into the steady but exhilarating gait of a trained thoroughbred. Brand looked at his guest.

"It was mighty fine of you to send that note," he said. "Some women wouldn't, they would have misunderstood me, but you're too big for that and I admire you for it. You know, I was so eager to help Bob, and now that I've seen you I want to help you, too. I've got a wife and three children. Mrs. Reynolds, and all of the necessities and some of the luxuries have made our home life very beautiful. There's no reason why yours and Bob's shouldn't be the same if we can get some of those distorted notions out of his head. Why, he seems to think I'm one of the forty thieves, but I'd like to see him tell Mrs. Brand that sort of thing."

"I suppose your wife has just every thing in the world, hasn't she?"

"Everything I can give her. She would attend to that if I didn't. She can make me do anything. Sometimes when I think I'm a big man with big opinions, I find myself jumping through the hoop, lying down and rolling over and playing dead when it comes to the real issue."

"She must be a very fascinating woman. I wish I knew her."

"I intend you shall know her. She is not only fascinating, to my mind, but she's also very sensible, and I think that on both these scores you would be very congenial."

Brand sent the car ahead at a faster clip. Mrs. Collins, seated in the rear of the deep tonneau, and occupied chiefly in retaining possession of her ponderous headpiece, had no opportunity to join in or even hear the conversation of the two in front. The millionaire glanced back and smiled. There was a clear stretch of road ahead. He turned to Jane.

"Now, Mrs. Reynolds," he began, "let's get down to business. You heard our talk about the dam and the money?"

"Every word of it."

"And you believe everything I said—because it's true, isn't it?"

"I know it's true."

"Good. Here's the idea. We've got to make Bob take this money. Your part of the job is to bring him to his senses and my part of it is to hand over the cash. Now there's no hurry. It's going to take a long time to build this dam. You've got six weeks before we deliver the first order. If you're as smart as Mrs. Brand and as sensible as I think you are, you'll move out of that little bungalow back there before the six weeks are over. All you have to do is to guide him—gradually, but firmly. And I will help you. If you say the word, we'll form a little company right here, and as a working member of the company you will be entitled to some remuneration. This is merely a fair business view of it. While my chief motive in coming to Bob was to help him out of the rut, I'm not trying to conceal the fact that his gain is also my company's gain. If you become a party to this plan to make him listen to reason, you are entitled to some reward whether we are successful or not, and so, Mrs. Reynolds, I'm going to sort of put you on the payroll. We'll give Bob a little glimpse of a few centimes without letting him know anything about it."

Jane laughed, but she blushed in spite of herself. Brand's words were very clear and the prospects they presented very alluring. Inwardly, however, she had grave doubts about the propriety of accepting money from a man who was almost a stranger, even if it were for services rendered. But she made no answer at the moment. The speeding auto, the immediate exhilaration, the thought of gratification of a few desires and escape from her impecunious plight stirred up the bacteria of self-indulgence that had awakened and spread poison throughout the whole structure of her character. Brand watched her; he read the mental struggle and he struck home.

"Why, if you think it isn't right for you to accept any reward, just regard it in the nature of an advance. We are sure to succeed and then when you have the forty thousand, you can reimburse me, if you want, for the few favors extended now. We'll have that understanding."

TROTTER WINS FROM DAVIDSON

But Davidson Claims That They Did Not Play Trotter Team.

Davidson was defeated by Trotter last evening on the Trotter diamond by a score of 12-2. Houseer pitched for Trotter and had ten strikeouts, but King, of Davidson, was not far behind with nine.

The Davidson team make the claim that they went to Trotter to play their team but instead found only four from Trotter and five from the surrounding coke towns, even from Uniontown.

WEST SIDE IS DEFEATED.

Wheeler Uses Professionals and Takes Game to Lake Street.

The West Side Juniors were defeated by Wheeler last evening in a seven inning game by a score of 15-1. The fielding for the Juniors was poor and the score mounted up through errors. The Juniors' claims that Wheeler had a "kick" in his pitcher in the box and a professional player on first and that men of the same ability to play were scattered all over the field.

Davidson Wins Again.
The Davidson baseball aggregation defeated the Scottdale nine on the Davidson grounds Saturday evening by the score of 8 to 3. Sandusky pitched for Davidson and allowed six hits. Davidson allowed the Davidson boys but eight hits, but these all counted. Davidson will play at Scottdale Saturday.
